Child information sharing legislation victoria

In response to the coronavirus pandemic (COVID-19), we are delaying the start of Phase 2 of CISS, FVISS and the risk assessment and management frameworks for period 2. It is now proposed to start in the first half of 2021. This delay will support the key role educators and universal health services play in Victoria. Existing legislative frameworks for the proper sharing of information remain in force where there are concerns for the safety of children and victims of family violence. Mandatory reporting is also applicable to child safety concerns. Preparations for the start of Phase 2 in 2021 are continuing. Departments and agencies continue to develop a range of support, such as toolkits, online briefings and workshops to support the implementation of CISS, FVISS and MARAM. The Victorian government has introduced two reforms that will be an integral part of promoting the well-being and safety of children and reducing family violence: the Child Information Sharing System (CISS), which allows organisations and services to share information to promote the well-being and safety of children, and the Family Violence Information Sharing System (FVISS), which allows organisations and services to share information to facilitate the assessment and management of the risk of family violence for children and adults. Together, these reforms create a more integrated collaborative system that will help improve outcomes for all Victorian children and families. In order to reduce family violence and promote the well-being and safety of children, information sharing laws have changed. General information that facilitates transparency requirements in principle 5.1 and health protection principle 5.1 Laws governing the management of information on persons involved in family violence and the safety and well-being of children have changed. FVISS and CISS are changing the way information on victims, perpetrators, alleged perpetrators and other persons involved in family violence or child welfare or safety can be collected, used and shared. Part 5A of the Family Violence Protection Act 2008 (Vic) and Part 6A of the Child Welfare and Safety Act 2005 (Vic) with their support regulations allow key organisations to share up-to-date and previously collected information regarding the risk of family violence and the well-being or safety of children - so that people are safe and perpetrators of violence in perspective. The first group of organisations joined FVISS in February 2018 to better share information. On 27 September 2018, both the next phase of the scheme (which includes other organisations that will participate on board) and the first phase of the CIS were launched. Learn more about the family violence sharing system and the child information sharing system (external link) Deaths and Marriages Victoria (BDM) treats privacy very seriously. However, the law allows BDM to share information when needed to promote the wellbeing or safety of Victorian children. On the Child Information Sharing System, the Child Welfare and Safety Act 2005 (Act) and the Child Welfare and Safety (Information Sharing) Regulation 2018 (CIS Regulation) entered into force on 27 June 2005. The law and regulations allow certain organisations (information sharing bodies) to share confidential information to promote the well-being or safety of Victorian children. In some cases, sharing this information is required by law. The registrar of birth, death and marriage is included in the law. Learn more about the child information sharing program (external link). Use This information is intended for information sharing entities (ISEs) under Victorian law. If you are a prescribed information sharing entity (ISE), you should: 1. Consider alternatives Is your BDM information request already permitted by another law? If so: use the procedures provided for in this Act. If not: you can request to share information according to the law. Request sharing information under the law If you are an ISE, ask: Learn more about the types of information bdm holds. BDM will attempt to respond within five business days. However, it may take longer in periods of high demand or if the requirement is complex. We will contact you if we need further information. Questions and complaints about privacy can be found in BDM's privacy statement. The system allows information to be shared between authorised organisations in order to promote the well-being or safety of the child. It's okay to share, it could make a difference. The child information sharing system allows authorised organisations to share information to promote the well-being or safety of children. Many organisations are already working on this. The system expanded legal permissions for professionals to share and request information from other experts. This ensures that professionals working with children can get a complete overview of the children they work with, making it easier to identify well-being or safety needs sooner and earlier according to them. Legitimate organisations include services that work with children, young people and families, such as child protection, youth justice, maternal and child health and Victoria Police. For a list of authorized organizations and services, see the list of authorized organizations and services. Who's covered? All Victorian children and young people aged 0 to 18 are covered by the Child Information Sharing Programme. How sharing can change Watch the videos below and hear from some of the program champions how sharing can make a difference. Liana Buchanan, Commissioner for Children and Young People Stacey Brown, Executive Director Children's Services Squad Sue Higgins, principal of St Kilda Primary School Child Link will be an online platform that displays information about the child to authorised key professionals who have responsibility for the child's welfare and safety. Child Link and the Child Information Sharing Programme will work together to help professionals provide the clarity and tools they need to share important information to help improve outcomes for children and young people in Victoria. For more information about the child link, see Link to child.
